Where Spirits Call

God, let this battle be my last,
This firefight a spectre of the past.
My hands have held the gun too long,
The sword's keen edge has sung its song.

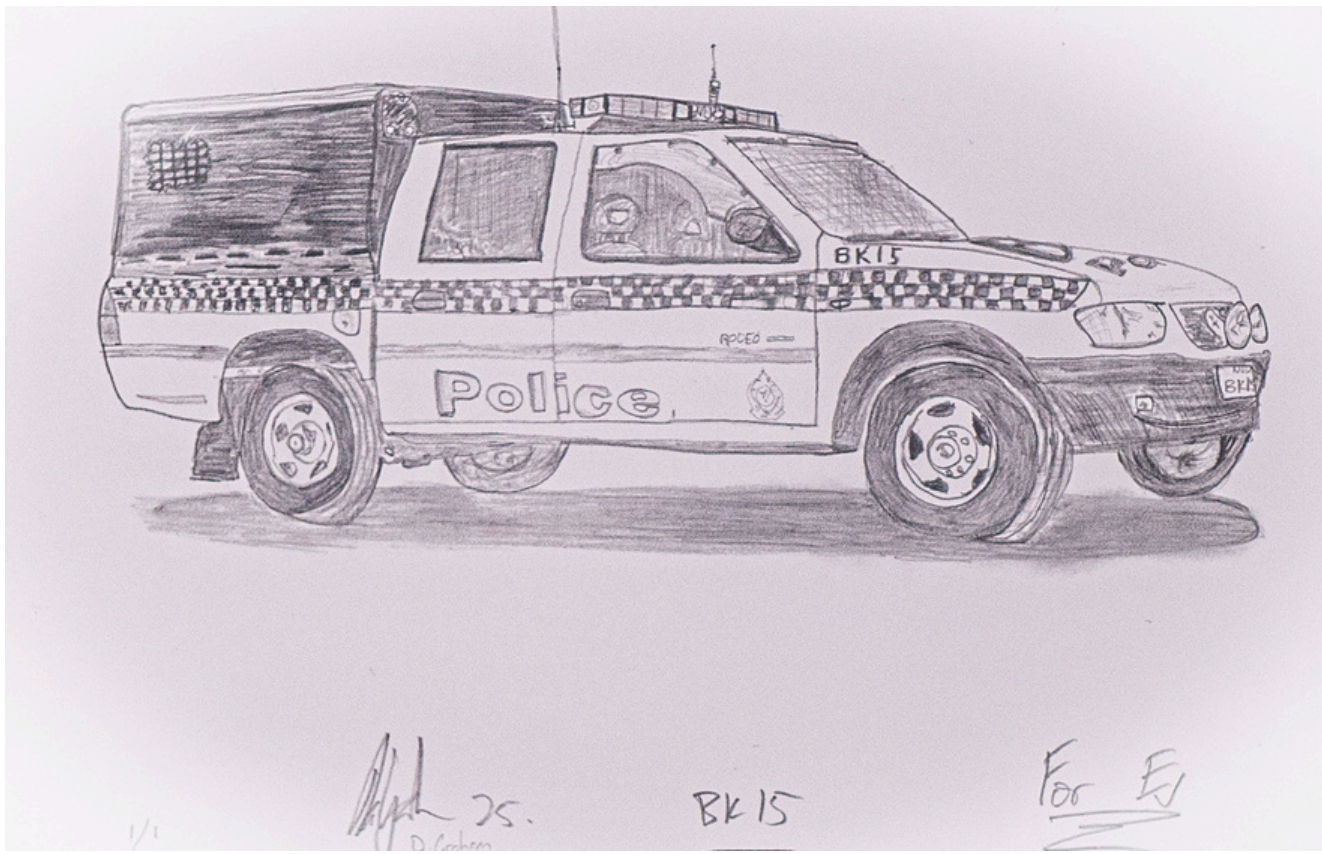

Let this be the war that ends them all,
Where strength endures, yet spirits call
Not for surrender, but for peace at last
The weight of conflict fading fast.

Heaven's peace is all I crave,
A shield of hope, both strong and brave
Let nightmares fade where shadows cling,
And wars all cease their shattering sting.

Blood and battle steal all gain,
Only ruin spreads, a lasting stain.
God, let it end — this endless fight,
And grant, at last, a healing rest.
